March 30, 2023

Argentina Morning View

- IN A NUTSHELL: Alberto Fernandez and Sergio Massa toured NY and DC, seeking (i) additional flex in the IMF targets and (ii) fresh financing to compensate for the FX market shortfall resulting from the drought. The last two days' rally in Argy paper seems to suggest that the market believes they might be successful.
- RATIONALE: Besides getting some respite from the local politics and economic dynamics, Messers Fernandez and Massa's tour through the US has two very clear objectives: securing (i) some additional flex in the IMF program's targets and (ii) fresh financing to plug the hard currency shortfall that the Government faces. Mr. Massa started the tour by meeting with the IMF. According to the media rumors, the meeting sealed the passing of the fourth review and locked in the SDR4bn disbursement scheduled on completion of the March-23 review. Those monies would keep the EFF program funded until June, allowing the BCRA to recover the payments it made during 1Q23. The media also reports that the talks with the IMF included additional flex in the targets. We argued yesterday that the USD2bn easing of the 1Q23 target was insufficient to compensate for the deviations, factoring in the drop in reserves at the start of 2023. Yesterday, the BCRA sold another USD95mn and continued losing deposits, pushing reserves the wrong way. We expect the IMF to ease the targets further in the coming months to prevent the need for a waiver in the fifth review (due in June based on the end-March data).

The second stop on the tour was a meeting with Mr. Goldfajn at the World Bank. Since taking office, Mr. Massa has been more successful than Mr. Guzman in dealing with non-IMF IFIs and securing financing. In 2021, the Government just managed to roll over the maturities; in 1H22, it paid USD543mn more than IFIs disbursed. Since Mr. Massa took office, non-IMF IFIs have disbursed USD1.9bn in net financing. In 1Q23, however, the Government paid USD1.2bn net to IFIs excluding IMF. In this context, Mr. Massa is negotiating with these IFIs to secure net financing in 1H23. Over the past month, the Government secured USD840mn from CAF to finance the reversal of the flow of the Northern pipeline and some disability programs, of which USD240mn were disbursed in March. It also secured USD400mn from the BICE. During the meeting with Mr. Goldfajn, Mr. Massa sought to secure about USD1.5bn in financing from the WB. With these disbursements, we estimate that the Government would get about USD1bn in net financing from IFIs in 2023.

The final stop was the meeting with President Biden. In it, Mr. Fernandez sought to have the US Treasury backing the Argy position to negotiate with the IMF. The problem is that the Government needs more from the IMF than just easing the targets. It needs net financing. In 2022, the Government accumulated USD4.9bn in reserves, despite a deterioration in the current account surplus, driven by USD6.9bn in net IMF financing. In 2023, however, the situation is likely to turn around. The payments on the 2018 SBA would exceed the disbursements of the 2022 EFF by USD2.2bn. In other words, the Government would get about USD8bn less from the IMF than it did in 2022. The Government is trying to get additional financing from the IMF so that the program is at least net zero in 2023 or preferably contributes some net financing. Initially, it seemed like a long shot, but the Government seems to be taking a political approach to the problem, seeking the US Treasury support.

The big question is, was the trip a success or Alberto Fernandez's rainbow tour? It's hard to tell at this point, given how little signal and how much noise there usually is around the Government statements regarding its financing sources. The best example is the repo with international banks and SWFs, which the Government said was done in September and February, and now seems dead on the water again. If we take the last two days' rally in Argy paper, which was 10 times as high as the EMB, the market seems to be giving the Government the benefit of the doubt.
